THURSDAY MORNING JAN 16, 1862

The Great Rebellion

The people of the loyal States have scarcely understood the formidable proportions of the present rebellion Most of them were made to believe that it sprang up on the instant when the facts were that it was long concerted and during the whole administrations of Messrs Polk and Buchanan the political leaders of the South were preparing for the outbreak While the measures for this rebellion were in progress, they adroitly managed to hide them from the public eye Who believed, until now, that the Secretary of War under Mr Buchanan devoted himself to the stealing of arms, cannon, and other munitions of war from the North, during his whole official term, that the North should be disarmed and the rebellion at once be a success? Who can now possibly believe that other members of Mr. Buchanan's cabinet were not in these secrets? Who can now suppose that Mr Buchanan was ignorant of what was going on? All these facts show why Southern politicians desired no compromise—listened to none—officially declaring that they would not make peace, even if blank paper were presented them on which they could write the terms

When the war broke out neither our people or our government had a just conception of the formidable preparations made by the South for this rebellion The experience of a few months after its commencement demonstrated, that the whole power of the loyal States must be put forth to crush it—and that they must make sacrifices approximating to those made by the slave oligarchy and their degraded minions The war has developed more of the character of the rebels than was ever known before With passions unrestrained, and a helpless class of negroes around them, over whom they could exercise their brutal propensities with impunity, they have been educated to the work in which they are now engaged They are now in their natural element, exhibiting to the world the results of the system in which they have been schooled, and which has always led to the same results in every part of the world.

These men have a Satanic cunning in their aims and efforts They have long pretended to be acting upon the defensive, while they were studiously preparing for the unprovoked outrages which they have perpetrated They have told their people, and their friends have echoed their words in the free States, that the war was not of their seeking—that it was an abolition war, got up expressly for the abolition of slavery This lie is believed among the credulous of the South, who really feel that they are defending their firesides from invasion; and it has been believed by some simple ones in the free States—in the face of all facts to the contrary

We are often met with this argument: If the rebels are, in their institutions, their education, habits and morals so different from the people of the free States, why not then let them alone, to go off by themselves—close up the war, and save the loss of further lives and property? There would be reason in this suggestion, if our hard success could be [illegible] or if a treaty of peace would last a dozen years But any concession to rebellion now, in its comparative infancy, would be a confession of the imbecility of the Government, which would subject us to the contempt of our foes and of all the nations of the earth A dozen years of peace would give them time to complete their equipments prepare a navy fortify their coasts, and embroil us in a war ten times more terrible than this one now on our hands Any concession to them now would be a license to any one or more of the free States to set up for themselves or unite their fortunes with the Southern Confederacy

So that, look at the matter as we may there is but one course for the Government and the loyal States to take, and that is to fight on until the rebellion is annihilated, even though one or more of the European powers should be in arms against us Even though the Atlantic coast should be desolated from the Chesapeake to the Penobscot and we be compelled to retreat to the mountains, we must fight on, never [illegible] compromising with rebels and traitors

The oligarchy evidently hate republican institutions and if they can secure their independence, there will be continual [illegible] and complaints between us and [illegible] institutions and theirs, and Mexico would be a happy country compared with ours We must put down the rebels, or they will subjugate us and the darkness of barbarism will in fifty years brood over the entire continent

PROGNOSTICATION OF A SUSPENSION OF CASH PAYMENTS IN THE UNITED STATES.—The "city article" of the London Times of October 23d, says "The resumption of gold remittances to the United States is a singular but wholly unimportant fact. The certainty is just as strong as ever that if the war continues, not merely shall we witness the drain of specie from that country but a suspension of cash payments The government expenditure is at the rate of £100,000,000 sterling per annum, and when it was only £15,000,000 with all their people engaged to the utmost in industrial pursuits the United States were not usually found year by year to accumulate any exceptional stock of the precious metal The idea that under their changed circumstances and with £40,000,000 sterling or nearly half their usual exports, cut off by the cotton blockade, they may now, for the first time, begin to fill their coffers and draw away the supply of the rebels is the most extraordinary assumption that could be entertained."

The trade between the United States and England has greatly changed since the rebellion We import few goods, because our manufactories are at work, and the people do not need them hence we save a large amount of money which formerly went to England for goods And again we are sending a large amount of breadstuffs to England—for she must have bread, whether she have cotton or not, proving that BREAD, not cotton, is KING

WILL IT WORK?—The Victorians, satisfied that their mines cannot compete with those of Oregon and Washington, have induced the two steamship companies to enter into an arrangement by which they are to run their steamers each every third trip, direct to Victoria, and not touch at this port until returning. For this attempt to force miners to go to the British Columbia mines, the Victorians agree to pay the owners of the different steamers a subsidy of four thousand dollars per month The object of this movement is very transparent. Will it pay?

BRODERICK'S WILL—The document purporting to be Senator Broderick's will has been pronounced a forgery by the district court, of the 4th judicial district of California That court has pronounced that deceased died intestate, and that his property escheats to the State Receivers will be appointed on behalf of the State

The Statesman concurs in the proposition for a Union State Convention It says "Union men, everywhere, will greet the proposal as a certain means of defeating the schemes and aspirations of the disunion men in Oregon by a handsome majority"

EDWIN CROSWELL, the venerable editor of the Albany Argus—a well known leading democrat of New York—endorses [illegible] speech upon the slave question and he also states that Daniel S Dickinson approves of it

THE SECESSION MOVEMENT.—J H Slater has called a convention of the old Breckinridge party in this State Four-fifths of that party in the east are open rebels against the government Whether Slater's aim is to gather the remnants of the faction [illegible] to the assistance of Jeff Davis, [illegible]

RECEIVING THEIR REWARD—Time makes all things even. [illegible] the most influential of the demagogues who labored to plunge the nation into civil war are now living their reward at the hands of the very people [illegible] consulted. Ex-Governor Wise defeated and [illegible] Rhett [illegible] nation that brought on the rebellion is publicly branded [illegible] shrouded in an infamy that must [illegible] So perish all traitors

J H Mitchell, Esq, has removed to Williams & Gibbs' building, over the Post Office

Late News

REMOVAL.—The San Francisco Mirror mentions a report from Los Angeles that a force of 10,000 rebels was in Arizona Territory—[illegible] believed

GOVERNMENT BANK.—The New York Journal of Commerce says that Government have in contemplation the establishing of a government bank [illegible] with sub-treasuries—[illegible] to furnish a national currency and to equalize exchanges This statement may be true but the Journal of Commerce is usually [illegible] when it speaks of government

WEATHER IN SAN FRANCISCO.—California has not had so long a spell of good weather ever [illegible] the present season On Sunday, the [illegible] rain continued in San Francisco without interruption. On the 7th heavy rains still continued. The Alta says—Owing to the immense volume of water pouring into the Bay from the Sacramento, San Joaquin and smaller streams the entire Bay presents as [illegible] an appearance as the main rivers themselves and gives us in advance some idea of the extent of the freshets in the interior With the shifting of wind the thermometer fell and at an early hour stood within [illegible] degrees of the freezing point Now that the weather has partially cleared the peaks of Monte Diablo, the foothills of Alameda, Contra Costa, and Marin counties and even San Bruno in this county are seen covered with snow Doubtless we shall soon hear of a tremendous snow storm in the Sierras, inasmuch as the weather has been altogether colder in the upper country

SAD PICTURE OF NEW ORLEANS.—A gentleman writes 22d November—"I do not think that New Orleans can hold out three months longer. All kinds of foreign goods and clothing have doubled and quadrupled their usual price The banks do not pay out their own bills—only Confederate notes, which are not payable at all but receivable for taxes and convertible into Confederate bonds. Go with a check for a hundred dollars to a bank and the teller will throw you out two notes for fifty dollars each Ask for something smaller and he will say, 'All I can give you.' If you want small shinplasters, you must go to a broker and pay [illegible] per cent for them. The newspapers no longer print a double sheet but are reduced in size and on miserable paper The price of real estate remains firm because people prefer to hold it rather than take Confederate notes or bonds in payment. On the contrary, negroes are very cheap—for $600 you can buy a negro worth $1500. They are considered now [illegible] property, but the [illegible] A great many French families are preparing to leave, persuaded that business is at an end till the close of the war"

DESTRUCTION OF COTTON.—A letter from Charleston, Nov 21st, says that the Union men have taken the last bag of cotton on the coast of South Carolina. Concert arrangements between the planters and military authorities have wisely been made by which no plantation will hereafter be abandoned until the crop is utterly consumed, the gin house and other buildings destroyed, the live stock driven off and the hands removed to the interior

CITY.

PUBLISHING A PAPER UNDER DIFFICULTIES.—A man left here on Tuesday morning for Vancouver with a bundle of paper on his back, on which to print the Telegraph, of that place. The man was afoot; the snow nearly two feet deep; distance, good ten miles; the weather cold enough to freeze Oregon whisky; and a river, nearly a mile wide, covered with thin ice, and full of air-holes, to cross, with ten chances to one of being drowned! If this is not printing a paper under difficulties, we are at a loss to know what is.

EXPORTS.—The following are the products taken as freight by the Brother Jonathan, which is to sail from St. Helens this morning: 9,458 boxes apples, 22 packages eggs, 6 rolls leather, 270 hides, 4 coops chickens, 600 sacks flour, 10 packages merchandise.

SHIPMENT OF GOLD DUST.—In consequence of the stoppage of navigation on the Columbia river, only one express from the mines has arrived, and that was carried on the back of the messenger. Therefore, the total amount of gold dust shipped per steamer Brother Jonathan amounted to only $22,650.

FOR THE UPPER WILLAMETTE.—The steamer Onward, Capt. Pease, on the Upper Willamette, will not leave for Corvallis until Monday next—connecting with the steamer Express from this place.

THE PRICE OF HAY.—Owing to the great quantity of snow which covers the stock ranges, persons selling hay ask the enormous sum of forty dollars per ton.

MAP.—We thank the Times office for a Salmon river map.

Two men arrived from Vancouver last night, at eight o'clock, bringing the mail. They crossed the Columbia on the ice.

Our town is filled with strangers. Public houses must greatly increase their accommodations. Great additions to the sleeping department of the Columbian Hotel have recently been made.

The steamers cannot reach Vancouver from this city. The Willamette is free of ice; but the Columbia is closed with it. Many persons have crossed the river on the ice from Vancouver.

The farmers in the interior are improving the fine sleighing for bringing produce to the city. The sleighing is very fine, where there are smooth roads.

Two weeks have elapsed since we have had news from the east of the Cascades. There is no present appearance of the ice moving in the river.

Express matter will not be sent over the overland route for the present; but will be taken to San Francisco by the steamers.

The finest kind of beef was offered in town yesterday from wagons, by the quarter, ten and six cents.

NO WONDER THERE WAS A FLOOD.—The Sierra Citizen, referring to the storm at Downieville, gives this statement of the amount of rain that fell in a brief period: "A correct rain gauge of Dr. Kibbe says that, in the short period of three days—from nine o'clock on Friday morning until Monday morning at the same hour—over twelve and a half inches of rain fell; and on Sunday over seven inches. In November, 13,50-100, and in December, 14.46-100 inches fell. It must be borne in mind that when over a foot of rain falls on a level, the amount rushing from mountain sides, four miles high on either side, the additional amount which must necessarily accumulate, is incalculable."

Swett's Grape Bitters, or Restorative Wine, manufactured under the supervision of Mrs. A. M. Swett, the celebrated Clairvoyant Physician and prepared from roots and herbs of great medicinal virtue, combined with the pure juice of the California Grape—a certain remedy for Liver Complaint, Debility, Billiousness, Costiveness, Dyspepsia, Impaired Appetite, Impure Breath, &c., and all diseases requiring a powerful Liver Invigorator and Tonic. Warranted the best remedy ever invented for diseases peculiar to females, such as Leucorrhea or Whites, Weaknesses, &c. Sold by all Druggists and by DANIEL SWETT, Proprietor 528 California street, San Francisco.

The Medical and Surgical Institute of DR. L. J. CZAPKAY is already secured in a position which places it, as well as its proprietor, far above the assaults of envy and professional malice. In the schools of France, the highest prizes are often awarded to practitioners in this department of medical science, and they occupy with others an equally lofty position in the profession. Ricord is an illustrious example, a shining light among the philosophical stars of his age in Europe and Dr. Czapkay has fully equalled him in this country; as a proof of which the Philadelphia College of Medicine complimented him with a Diploma and the honorary ad eundem degree. Selecting this as his field of operation, although qualified as a graduate of the University of Pesth, and late Chief Surgeon of the Hungarian Revolutionary army, for more extended labors, Dr. L. J. Czapkay has bent his earnest attention to the cure of chronic and private diseases in which he has become so great an expert that he is now regarded as the leader in this branch of his profession throughout the United States, and his portrait and biography are published as matter of interest to their readers in the most extensive journals. The Doctor's offices are at his Medical and Surgical Institute, on Sacramento street, corner of Leidesdorff, nearly opposite the buildings of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, San Francisco. We ask particular attention of our readers to the sworn certificates of remarkable cures in another column of this paper. Persons not wishing to lose time in a respond[illegible] please enclose $10 in their letters and they will get immediate attention to their cases. Address, L. J. CZAPKAY, M. D., San Francisco, Cal.

Coughs.—The sudden changes of our climate are sources of PULMONARY, BRONCHIAL and ASTHMATIC AFFECTIONS. Experience having proved that simple remedies often act speedily and certainly when taken in the early stages of the disease recourse should at once be had to "Brown's Bronchial Troches," or Lozenges, let the Cold, Cough, or Irritation of the Throat be ever so slight, as by this precaution a more serious attack may be effectually warded off. PUBLIC SPEAKERS and SINGERS will find them effectual for clearing and strengthening the voice. See advertisement.

FAMILY
SEWING MACHINES
ARE UNEQUALLED BY ANY FOR BEAUTY AND SIMPLICITY OF CONSTRUCTION
—AND—
Efficiency in Working.

A GOOD SEWING MACHINE

SHOULD BE WELL MADE, simple in its construction, and easily kept in order; should make a TIGHT LOCK-STITCH, alike on both sides of the material, and should sew any and all materials that can be sewed.

It should be able to use cotton, thread, or silk, directly from the spool, and to sew from coarse to fine and from thick to thin, with rapidity, and without changing the tension. It should also be able to make the tension greater or less, on both the under and upper threads, and with uniformity; and should have a straight needle, curved ones being liable to break.

The needle should have perpendicular motion—this is absolutely necessary for heavy work.

It should be able to bind with a binder, hem with a hemmer; should stitch, fell, run and gather; and always ready to work.

It should be capable of using the same size thread on both sides of the work, and of using different colored thread or silk above or below, to correspond with any two colors of cloth to be united.

It should be able to make a long or short stitch, and to fasten off the seam, and commence sewing tightly at the first stitch, and to run easily, and make but little noise.

It should have a wheel-feed; no others are in constant contact with the work.

It should not be liable to get out of order; neither should it require a screw-driver or wrench to set the needle.

It should not be liable to oil the operator's dress.

It should not form a ridge on the under side, nor ravel.

The undersigned are General Agents for the general supervision of these unrivalled machines for Pacific States and Western Coast of Mexico.

That fullest seems when nothing's in it;
And Nine-Pins set, like systems, up
To be knocked down the following minute.

Like sinners old, or politicians,
That turn about with every shake,
In hopes to better their condition.
Tetotums we've for patriots sight,
Who court the mob with antics humble;

A glorious spin and then a tumble.

The Legion of Honor.

"Are you willing he should go?"

"And why not?" answered the young wife, enthusiastically. "I should despise myself, Adele, if I were not willing to give my husband to my country. France needs all her sons in this extremity. I thank God I have Henri to offer on her altar."

Her sister shrugged her shoulders. "You always were romantic, my dear," she said.—"For my part, if I had a handsome husband, a splendid estate in Normandy, a hotel in Paris, diamonds, cashmeres, equipages, servants, as you have, I should not be willing to risk them so lightly. Suppose Henri is killed. You will be a widow, and for a time at least, can enjoy none of these things."

"Oh! Adele, how can you talk so? Has not good Father La[illegible] been telling us ever since we were children, that the [illegible] times was its materialist excess of luxury? That to eat, drink and be merry, seemed to be the whole purpose of existence?—[illegible] a corroded nation as we are [illegible] the days of [illegible] had passed? [illegible] heart swelled against the [illegible] will not believe [illegible] low. No, I have often told him [illegible] parts of our race have not all [illegible]. We are still capable, we women, of [illegible] sacrifices for our country; and our husbands, fathers, brothers, sons, are still capable of dying for it. I could, myself, if the [illegible] for it, be, I hope, a second Joan of Arc. I never loved Henri half so much as when he came home the other day and told me that in this crisis of France's fate, he had determined to offer his sword, and, if necessary his life. We can die but once. What more glory is there than to die in a holy cause?"—And the young wife looked sublime as she spoke it.

Natalie had been married but a year or two. Her beauty, accomplishments and amiability had won for her at eighteen the heart of the young Count de Tankerville, the greatest match of the season. Passionately attached to each other, they read, they rode, they did everything in company. The life they led was more like an idyl than like a life in modern society in Paris. In the midst of this dream of bliss came the news of the retreat from Moscow. All Europe rose against France. The Emperor, beaten back from Dresden to Leipsic, and from Leipsic to the Rhine, was making a last desperate effort to retrieve the fortunes of the nation. It was in this extremity that the young Count stepped forward. His father had been a [illegible] royalist in the last days of Louis XVI, and the family had never emigrated; it had never, on the other hand, attached itself to the fortunes of Napoleon. So long as the great Emperor pursued his career of conquest, so long the Tankervilles held aloof from him. But now, when the question was not [illegible], but the nation, the young Count felt that the time had come when his country demanded his services. In view of the dismemberment of France, what were [illegible] itself? "Save the nation!" was the cry that rose to every patriotic lip. Women brought their jewels, men brought their lives. Foremost among these were Henri and his wife.

"Well," said Adele, who was one of those cold selfish natures that could not understand how anybody could do anything noble or heroic, "I think you and your husband are mad, but go your own ways."

"I wish you were mad in the same way.—We are mad as Leonidas was mad, as Tell was mad, as Bruce was mad, as every other hero was mad who has died for liberty. It is not now a question of the Emperor. It is a question of the country. It is not whether Napoleon shall reign, but whether France shall be dismembered. It is whether the flag of the nation, that glorious tricolor which waved at Marengo and Austerlitz, shall be trailed in the dust or shall still bring tears to the eyes of Frenchmen, as foreign [illegible] from the mastheads."

We will not dwell on the parting of husband and wife. Natalie bore up heroically. Not even Lady Russel, when leaving her lord on the sad morning of his execution, controlled herself more nobly, than did Natalie now. But when the door had closed on Henri, when she heard the clatter of his horse's feet down the street, then she flung herself on her bed, and wept as if her heart were breaking.

It was an eventful winter. A battle was fought almost daily. Like a lion in the toils, Napoleon turned first on one and then on another of his foes, and always unexpectedly. In the brightest days of his intellect he had never been so terrible as now. Henri was foremost in all these terrible battles. Once he saved the Emperor's life. The cross of the legion of honor soon decked his breast; He received the decoration from Napoleon's own hand, on the very day he heard Natalie had presented him with a son. But the genius of the Emperor and the valor of his troops were of no avail. Treachery was at work at Paris while Napoleon was absent in Champagne. The capital was surrounded. The Emperor was forced to abdicate.

Every one knows what followed. The Bourbons came back, forgetting nothing, as was said, and forgiving nothing.

"Ah, my bleeding country," Henri would cry to his young wife. At another time it was "Oh for one hour by the old Emperor."

At last the nation could bear it no longer. Napoleon landed; the army rose in his favor; the king fled; a constitution was proclaimed. Once more the young count buckled on his sword.

"Again I say go," was the wife's heroic parting, "and again and again. I will stay at home and pray. I think sometimes it is harder for women than for men. You have the excitement of the campaign; but we only wait from one day to another, we can only pray and pray through the sleepless hours of the night. Do not suppose I say this to keep you back,—Go, may God crown you with victory, or if not—"

"If not," said her husband interrupting, "I will stay on the battle field."

Alas! it was a prediction. A few days later, when the old guard, at the end of that terrible Waterloo, closed up their ranks, and, to the demand to lay down their arms, replied, "The Guard dies but never surrenders," Henri de Tankerville, fighting with the bravest, and fighting longest almost of all, sank under a dozen wounds.

Did his wife regret what she had done? "No, no," she cried in answer to the cruel reproaches of her sister, "I would send him forth again if I could. I would rather be a widow a thousand times over," she added with flashing eyes, "of a soldier who has died for his country, than the petted wife of one who had failed France in her hour of need. For such would be either a coward or a traitor."
